

ROYAL FLUSH

Summer's sun-kissed glow took a sophisticated turn on runways this year, lending a high-fashion edge to a perennial favorite. Rather than a flat, all-over bronze, try colors strategically placed to warm up the face and impart a healthy glow. Tap NARS Gilda Blush, a coral with a hint of red, along cheekbones and pair with a peachy-brown eyeshadow on lids — you'll look like you spent the day at the beach. For an edgier version, try the look from Pamela Roland, where pinly-bronze shades were applied high on the cheekbones and up around the temple. Or if you prefer bronzer, mix a little translucent powder with it to sheer it out, like Tom Pecheux did at Ralph Lauren, and then sweep bronzer from one cheek, across the bridge of the nose, to the other cheek.

Head Lambert
at Ralph Lauren.

Use this blush wet or dry for different effects.
NARS Dual Intensity Blush in Frezzy.

Another way to warm up the complexion, like at Sublime: Use a BB cream one shade darker. This one is sheer enough to look like real skin. Burberry Fresh Glow B.B. Cream in Dark.

Bobbi Brown
Face & Body
Bronzing Duo
in Antigua.

PAIR WITH

To achieve the right glow, skin care is key. Start with a healthy dose of hydration, like many makeup artists do at runway shows. Add a bit of gloss to brighten.

1. Vapour Organic Beauty Elixir Plumping Lip Gloss in Tickle. 2. Hard Candy All-Glossed Lip Hydrating Lip Shine in Fair Lady. 3. Charlotte Tilbury Charlotte's Magic Cream. 4. Jurlique Purely Age-Defying Firming and Tightening Serum. 5. Rouge Bunny Rouge Sweet Excesses Glossy Gloss in Cherry Clafoutis.

